SPECIAL REPORT:

OCTOBER 2017 – OCTOBER BRINGS 4TH WAVE
OF RANSOMWARE ATTACKS; “.ASASIN” EXTENSION
USED FOR ENCRYPTED FILES:

Part IV of the Evolving IKARUSdilapidated Locky Series

Phishing Attack is 4th IKARUSdilapidated Locky Incarnation of 2017 to Hit Endpoints as “Unknown” File

October 2017 Special Report (Part IV of IKARUSdilapidated Locky Series)

An October wave of new but related IKARUSdilapidated Locky ransomware attacks has been identified, making this the fourth reincarnation of the attacks discovered by the Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab in August 2017.

This October campaign is hitting tens of thousands of endpoints as an “unknown” file and therefore bypassing malware signature-based IT security (and even machine learning-based artificial intelligence tools). The hackers use a botnet of “zombie” computers under their control to coordinate a social engineering-based phishing attack targeting businesses and individuals.

The social engineering aspect involves the botnet sending emails to busy workers appearing to be about a “Supplement payment” from a legitimate source. As with the other IKARUSdilapidated attacks, clicking the attachment ultimately encrypts the victims’ computers and leads to a bitcoin ransom demand.

The example below is an actual e-mail with the subject “Supplement payment” from the first day of this global attack.

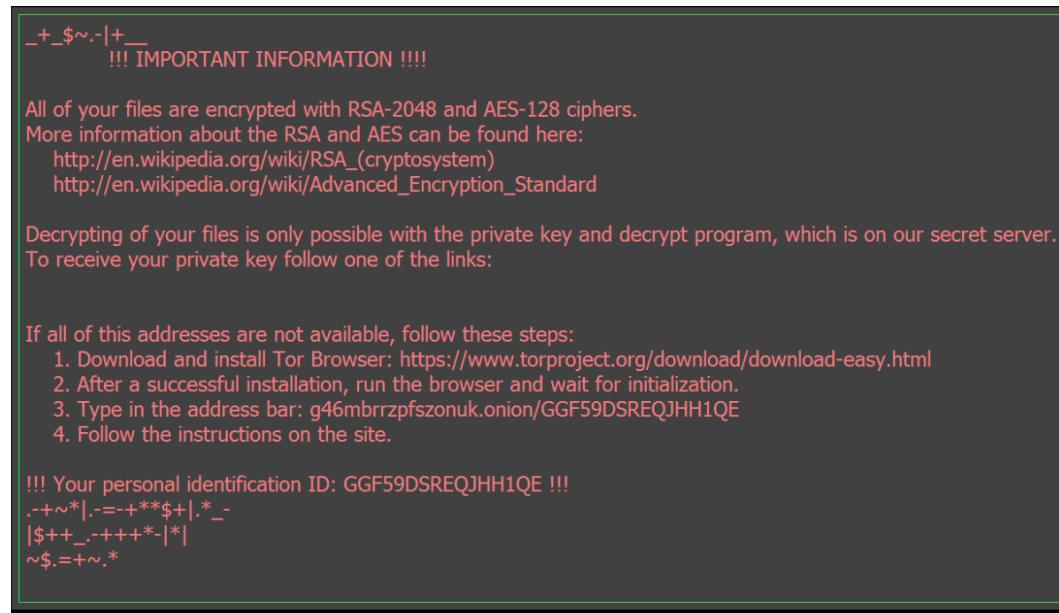

This targeted campaign started on October 11, 2017, with the main thrust ending on October 13, 2017. Interestingly, the person or team distributing these emails was not adding the attachments correctly, causing the attachments to not be visible to the recipient when opened. Instead, they appeared as a blob of base64 encoded text as shown in the image above.

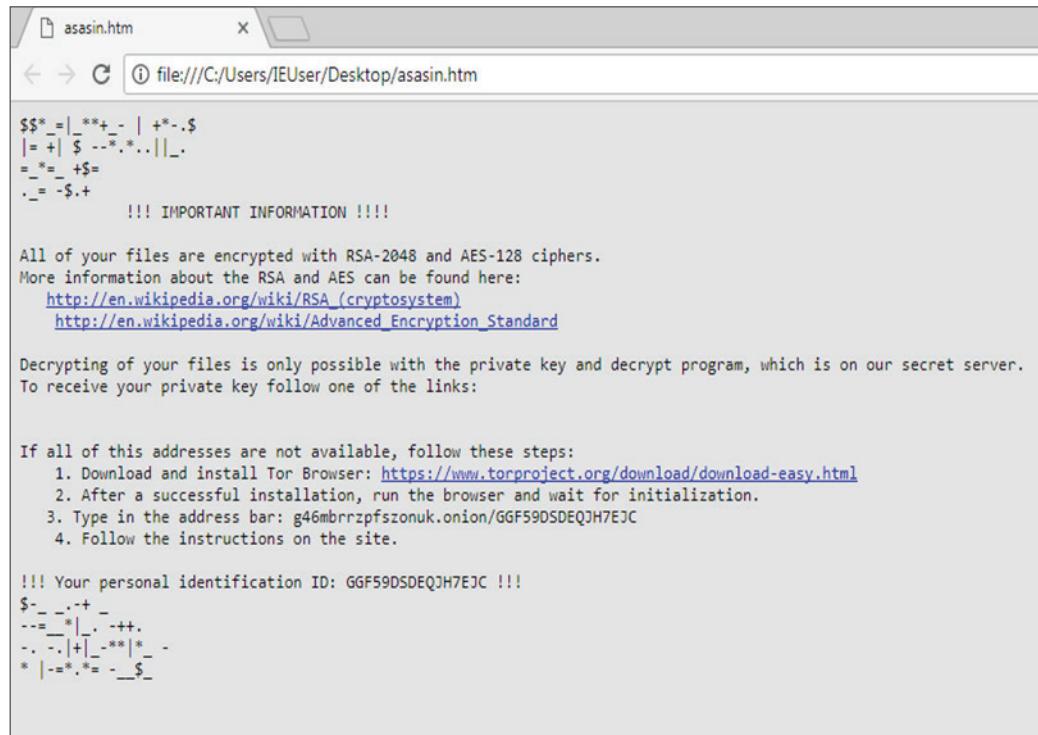

This malware is distributed with the “.asasin” extension and a Visual Basic Script (and has a “.vbs” extension). All 4 waves of the IKARUSdilapidated attacks were designed with enough new code to fool security administrators and their machine learning algorithms and signature-based tools and included interesting social engineering variations aimed to fool the employees receiving the emails as well.

The encrypted documents in this new attack have the new “.asasin” extension. In these attacks, “.vbs” files are distributed via email. This shows that malware authors are continuing to develop variations quickly to reach more users at firms which allow new, unknown files to enter their infrastructure through the endpoint. This unfortunately includes many firms in the F1000 as well as small and medium-sized enterprises.

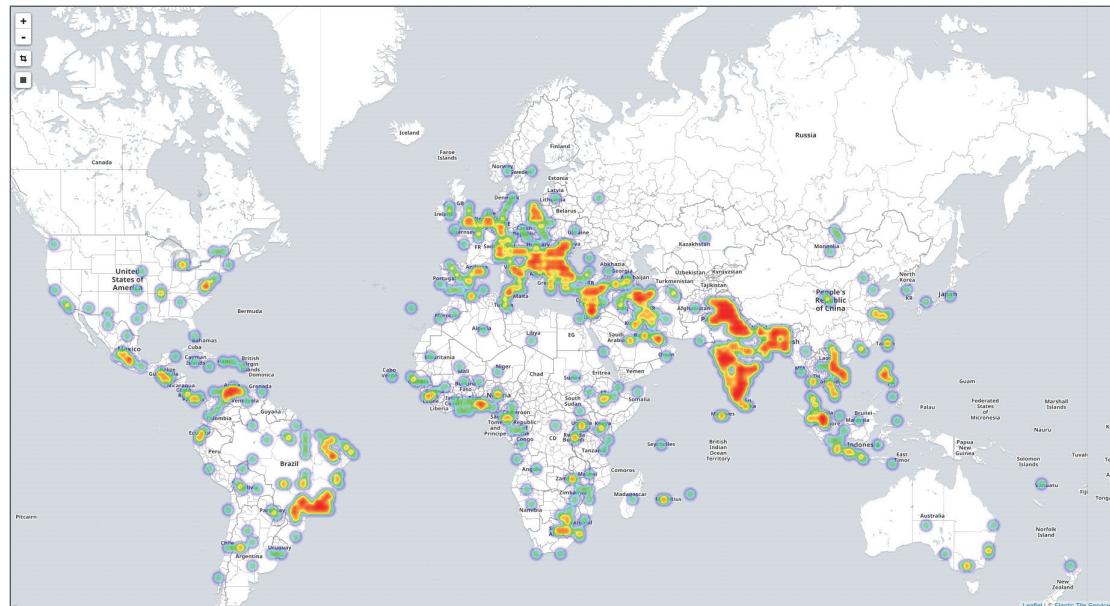

The victims here see the ransomware demand screen so familiar to the victims of the first three waves of IKARUSdilapidated Locky attacks during the summer months and September.

Looking closely at one view of the ransom screen, you see that they invoke Wikipedia as a means for the victim to learn more about the encryption ciphers:

Here is a heat map of the attack on October 11, 2017 featuring the “Supplement payment” subject line, showing the global range of this attack.

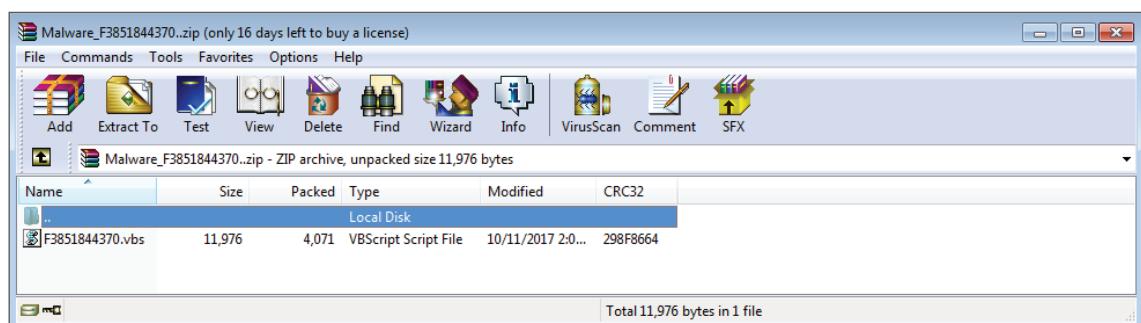

The botnet's ultimate leading sending locations and detail are captured in this table:

Country	Sum - Count Of Emails
India (IN)	3,537
Vietnam (VN)	2,138
Iran (IR)	675
Brazil (BR)	393

ISPs in general were co-opted heavily in this attack, which points again to both the sophistication of the attack and inadequate cyber-defense against new malware arriving at their endpoints. Here are the leading range owners detected in the “Supplement payment” attack:

Range Owner	Sum - Count Of Emails
Airtel Broadband	872
Vietnam Posts and Telecommunications (VNPT)	730
Viettel Corporation	530
FPT Telecom Company	438
Bharti Airtel	411

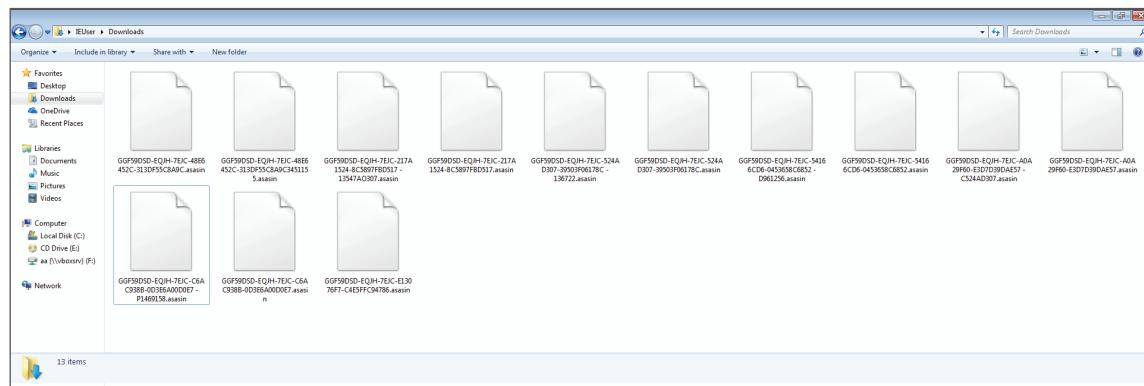

When the attachment is clicked, it appears as a compressed file to be unpacked:

Here you can see a sample of the scripting:

Phishing and Trojan experts from the Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab (part of Comodo Threat Research Labs) detected these “Locky” ransomware attacks and verified that they began on October 11th with more than 10,367 instances of phishing emails having been detected at Comodo-protected endpoints within just the first three days. The attachments were read as “unknown files,” put into containment, and denied entry until they were analyzed by Comodo’s technology and, in this case of A.I.-eluding sophisticated new malware, Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab human experts.

The Lab’s analysis of emails sent in the “Supplement payment” phishing campaign revealed this attack data: 9,177 different IP addresses being used from 143 different country code top-level domains maintained by the Internet Assigned Numbers Authority (IANA).

Amazingly, when the Lab analyzed the sources and compared them to the IP addresses that participated in the last three campaigns, 546 of the same IP addresses were used along with 8,631 different IP addresses utilized in this attack. This is another sign of either under-resourced or inadequately trained IT security staff (or likely both).

“The attacks from these hackers will continue as long as firms continue to utilize the inadequate strategies and tools from legacy vendors.” said Fatih Orhan, head of the Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab and Comodo Threat Research Labs (CTRL). “The unknown file problem is getting worse and we strongly encourage CSOs to reevaluate their “default allow” security posture and to evaluate next generation auto-containment and other isolation technologies which protect against new or newly malware like that used in these IKARUS Locky attacks.”

Attack Data – A Deeper Dive

Diving into the data of the October 2017 wave of attacks a bit deeper, the following Appendices include more details on the machines used in the attacks.

Appendix

NOTE: To compare the details of these attacks in Part IV with the prior IKARUSdilapidated Locky campaigns in August and September, 2017, see Parts I, II, and III of the Evolving Comodo Intelligence Lab Special Report IKARUSdilapidated Locky Series which appear as:

- I. IKARUSdilapidated Locky Ransomware

Note: As the malware payload and ransom elements are the same in all the August and September 2017 attacks, please see the original Part I report to review those elements.

Appendix A: Malware Analysis

Malware Name: TrojWare.VBS.TrojanDownloader.Agent.TST

SHA1: d9c1a11df5be7025c1009db1747c035dfd4f4ec1

Description: It is an obfuscated VBS script which downloads a payload(.exe) which is possibly a ransomware, runs it, and encrypts the files in the host. This script is of an online game with some malicious download capability.

Analysis Report

- The file contains a function named “detectCountry()” and with “Array(“http://freegeoip.net/json/”, “http://www.geoplugin.net/json.gp”, “https://ipinfo.io/json”)”,
urls which ensures it collects host system info and its location.

“For Each objOperatingSystem in colOperatingSystems

About The Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab

The Comodo Threat Intelligence Lab (the Lab) monitors, filters and contains, and analyzes malware, ransomware, viruses and other “unknown” potentially dangerous files 24x7x365 in over 190 countries around the world. With 5 offices spread across the Americas, Asia and Europe (and staff covering over 190 countries), the Lab is made up of more than 120 IT security professionals, ethical hackers, computer scientists and engineers (all full-time Comodo Lab employees) analyzing millions of potential pieces of malware, phishing, spam or other malicious/unwanted files and emails every day. The Lab also works with trusted partners in academia, government and industry to gain additional insights into known and potential threats.

The Lab is a key part of the Comodo Threat Research Labs (CTRL), whose mission is to use the best combination of cybersecurity technology and innovations, machine learning-powered analytics, artificial intelligence and human experts and insights to secure and protect Comodo customers, business and public sector partners and the public community.
